Curriculum Notes

ELA: We are reading Out of the Dust, a novel about the Great Depression and the Dust Bowl. Students will be writing poetry, creating a collection of different forms of poetry. For our year-end celebration, students will read one or more of their poems aloud.

Social Studies: Students will be exploring the geography of great buildings, climate, and diseases in history. They will also be putting them in order on a geohistogram to see the relationships among the three.

Science: We are wrapping up our study of cell structure and function; student groups have created a model of a destination designed to teach about the cell. Groups will visit each model and answer questions to demonstrate their understanding of the cell and its processes. Next, we will move on to human body systems.
